Question 9

---

Question Type: MultipleChoice

---

A full-time employee, having a plan balance of 200 hours, is associated with an accrual plan that has a ceiling limit of 250 hours. The employment status of the employee is changed to part-time, which has a reduced accrual plan ceiling limit of 150 hours.

What happens when the Calculate Accruals process is run?

Options:

---

- A- The application will automatically reduce the employee's balance to 150 hours to meet the new ceiling limit and new accruals will be generated once the balance falls below this threshold.
- B- The original balance of 200 hours will be automatically disbursed through their payroll, and accruals will start generating from that point onward with a ceiling of 150 hours.
- C- The original balance of 200 hours will remain valid, but will be moved to a different 'overflow-plan' to be spent as required. The new plan will accrue balances as normal up to the new 150 hours threshold.

D- The application will generate a zero-accrual record with the new reduced ceiling limit. The balance of 200 hours that the employee had when the employment status was full-time will remain even after the change in employment status because the balance can exceed the new reduced accrual plan ceiling limit. However, a new accrual amount will only be generated once the balance falls below the new accrual ceiling limit.

Answer:

---

D
